The PLM Education

HISTORY

Early Vision. The idea for the Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Maynila (PLM) began during Mayor Arsenio H. Lacson's time. As Manila's first elected mayor in 1951, he approved a city ordinance on 13 January 1960 that set aside one million pesos to create the University. Councilor Ernesto M. Maceda led the committee that supported this educational plan. Unfortunately, Mayor Lacson died before seeing his dream university come to life. His Vice-Mayor, Antonio Villegas, took over and continued the work. On 13 February 1963, Mayor Villegas created a committee to plan the university. Dr. Benito F. Reyes chaired this committee.

Making It Official. In 1964, Mayor Villegas worked with Congressman Justo R. Albert to introduce a bill in Congress to officially create the University. In the Senate, Senators Gil Puyat and Camilo Osias supported the effort. Congressman Albert explained why this University was important. He said that after food, education is people's greatest need. He believed that education should not be controlled by profit-seeking corporations but should focus solely on teaching people. He hoped other cities would follow Manila's example. Congress passed the combined bill in 1965, with the House approving it on 12 May 1965 and the Senate on 7 June 1965.

Presidential Approval. On 19 June 1965, President Diosdado P. Macapagal signed the bill into law. The signing ceremony at Malacañang Palace was witnessed by several officials including Mayor Villegas and Congressman Albert. The law was called Republic Act No. 4196 and serves as the University Charter.

A Meaningful Date. The University's Founding Date, June 19, is also significant because it is the birthday of Philippine national hero Dr. Jose Rizal, who valued education highly. Rizal believed education was essential for the country's progress and that it could save the Philippines from its problems. He wanted to inspire young people to develop their intelligence.

Getting Started. In 1967, Mayor Villegas gave the University its Filipino name – Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Maynila. That same year, he appointed members to the Board of Regents, the university's governing body. The board held its first meeting on 23 February 1967. Dr. Reyes was chosen as the University's first president. On 5 February 1970, the national government, through Executive Secretary Ernesto M. Maceda and with President Ferdinand Marcos's approval, gave the City of Manila two parcels of land where the University Campus is today. On 17 July 1967, the University officially opened with 556 bright students who were selected from the top 10% of Manila's public high schools. Excellence has always been central to the University's identity. A year later, the University established its Graduate College, followed by the Institute for Extramural Studies.

And that was just the beginning of the University's story.

Pamantasang Mahal

Pamantasan, Pamantasang Mahal
Nagpupugay kami't nag-aalay
Ng Pag-ibig, taos na paggalang
Sa patnubay ng aming isipan.

Karunungang tungo'y kaunlaran
Hinuhubog kaming kabataan
Maging Pilipinong mero'ng dangal
Puso'y tigib ng kadakilaan.

Pamantasang Lungsod ng Maynila
Kaming lahat dito'y iyong punla
Tutuparin pangarap mo't nasa
Pamantasan kami'y nanunumpa.
Pamantasan kami'y nanunumpa.

Awit ng Maynila

Tanging Lungsod naming mahal
Tampok ng Silanganan
Patungo sa kaunlaran at kaligayahan
Nasa kanya ang pangarap, dunong, lakas, pag-unlad
Ang Maynila'y tanging Perlas ng Bayan ngayo't bukas.

Maynila, O, Maynila
Dalhin mo ang bandila
Maynila, O, Maynila
At itanghal itong Bansa.

Panunumpa sa Watawat ng Pilipinas

Ako ay Filipino
Buong katapatang nanunumpa
Sa watawat ng Pilipinas
At sa bansang kaniyang sinasagisag
Na may dangal, katarungan, at kalayaan
Na pinakikilos ng sambayanang
Maka-Diyos, makatao, makakalikasan, at makabansa.

Panatang Makabayan

Iniibig ko ang Pilipinas, aking lupang sinilangan,
tahanan ng aking lahi;
kinukupkop ako at tinutulungang maging malakas, masipag, at marangal.

Dahil mahal ko ang Pilipinas, diringgin ko ang payo
ng aking magulang, susundin ko ang tuntunin ng paaralan, tutuparin ko ang tungkulin
ng mamamayang makabayan:
naglilingkod, nag-aaral at nananalangin nang buong katapatan.

Iaalay ko ang aking buhay, pangarap, pagsisikap
sa bansang Pilipinas.

Pledge of Loyalty

Ako'y mag-aaral na pinagpala ng Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Maynila. Sa aking pananagumpay sa pag-aaral, ako'y nanunumpang magtatapat sa adhikain, kapatiran, at aral ng aking Inang Pamantasan, upang mapatanyag ang kaunlaran, karunungan, at kadakilaan ng aking lahi at bayang pinakamamahal. Itinatalaga ko rin ang aking sarili at buhay sa paglilingkod sa Dakilang Lumikha, na simula at hantungan ng lahat; sa aking mga mahal sa buhay at kaibigan at sa lahat ng kapwa ko at kapatid sa iisang Diyos Amang makapangyarihan sa lahat.

Omnibus Guidelines on the Conduct of Flexible Learning and Teaching [20]

Background

The COVID-19 pandemic brought unprecedented disruptions to the higher education sector. Governments all around the world closed universities and colleges in an attempt to contain the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, and strictly enforced physical distancing in all areas of public life. Mass gatherings were prohibited, including those intended for educational or academic purposes.

In the Philippines, the National Government imposed different forms of community quarantine in Metro Manila, prohibited persons under the age of twenty-one (21) years old from going outside their homes, and limited public transportation. Despite these drastic measures however, the COVID-19 cases in the country continue to rise.

For higher education institutions like PLM, the challenge is to prevent and mitigate the spread of the COVID-19 infection within and among the academic community. This means that face-to-face classes shall be prohibited, and the PLM academic community has to develop new and innovative ways to continue academic instruction while protecting the health and safety of students, faculty members and administrative employees. The University has to adopt new pedagogical paradigms at the time of a pandemic while continuing to uphold the quality education that PLM is always known for.

Purpose and Coverage

To comply with national government guidelines on COVID-19 prevention and mitigation, the University shall adopt flexible learning and teaching modalities starting Academic Year (AY) 2020-2021.

This Omnibus Guidelines is being issued to provide guidance to faculty members, students and other stakeholders, on the implementation and conduct of flexible learning and teaching in PLM starting AY 2020-2021.

Definition of Terms

a. Flexible learning – a pedagogical approach allowing flexibility of time, place and audience including, but not solely focused on the use of technology. Although it commonly uses the delivery modes of distance education and facilities of education technology, this may vary depending on the levels of technology, availability of devices, internet connectivity, level of digital literacy, and approaches.

[20] Board Resolution No. 4801; PAO 16-ACA, s.2020

b. Learning Management System (LMS) – a software that is designed specifically to create, distribute, and manage the delivery of educational content.

c. Synchronous teaching/learning – a real time, instructor-led online learning event in which all participants are logged on at the same time and communicate directly with each other.

d. Asynchronous teaching/learning – learning/teaching in which interaction between instructors and students occurs intermittently with a time delay.

e. Printed Learning Materials – self-learning modules in print that guide the student through the learning activities for a subject matter.

f. Team Teaching – arrangement that include two or more faculty in some level of collaboration in the planning and delivery of a course.

g. Equivalent Contact Hours – a measure that represents the equivalent hour of scheduled instruction given to students in on online modality.

h. Netiquette – a blend of common sense, common courtesy, and dictates of the computer technology and culture established by internet users.

Flexible Learning

Flexible Learning is a pedagogical approach allowing flexibility of time, place and audience including, but not solely focused on the use of technology. It involves the use of digital and non-digital technology and covers face-to-face/in-person learning, out-of-classroom learning modes of delivery, or a combination of both. Flexible learning ensures the continuity of inclusive and accessible education when the use of traditional modes of teaching is not feasible.

For purposes of flexible learning, all colleges shall redesign all their courses and ensure that each course shall have the following minimum components:

- Course Syllabus with detailed learning plan
- Study Guide - a learning management tool where the faculty member can provide guidelines and directions to the students to manage their own learning
- Learning resources, e.g., materials to be used for teaching the course, such as PowerPoint presentations, PDF lectures, e-books, multimedia resources such as video lectures, and other forms of digital resources
- Printed learning materials to be distributed to students with low or no connectivity
- Summary of activities and assignments for the entire semester, including, as much as possible, the schedule of synchronous and asynchronous activities.
- Assessment tools which shall include a checklist of all the formative, summative, and authentic assessment tools or tasks that students have to accomplish during the semester

Guidelines on Online Learning for Students with Internet Connectivity and Access to Computer Gadgets

General Guidelines in the Conduct of Online Classes

1. Only the approved Learning Management System (LMS) of the University shall be used by faculty members in the conduct of their online classes.

2. Both synchronous and asynchronous modes of learning delivery can be used for all online classes, at the discretion of faculty members and in the exercise of their academic freedom.

   In synchronous learning, faculty members may use either Zoom or MS Teams. In asynchronous learning, on the other hand, faculty members shall use the MS Teams where they can upload their learning materials, whether in video, audio, power point or PDF files. They can also give online assignments, administer online quizzes, conduct forum discussions, conduct polls, etc. for asynchronous sessions.

3. At the beginning of the semester, all faculty members are required to upload in the MS Teams the course guide with detailed syllabus for the subject. This will guide the students on the planned lessons for the entire semester.

   Faculty members shall also share their online teaching materials and references, discuss the assessment system, and define the rubrics on how assignments and other written submissions shall be graded.

   Consultation hours of the faculty member must also be posted in the MS Teams class so students will be properly guided of his/her availability.

4. Faculty members shall conduct regular and substantive interactions with students in both synchronous and asynchronous modes of delivery, to determine whether the students understand their lessons, and to ensure that the students are participating in all course activities.

5. Faculty members must ensure that the students are engaged on a minimum of 54 hours per semester of course credit. For this purpose, lecture activities, whether synchronous or asynchronous, may be supplemented with other forms of learning activities such as teamwork, discussion forums, homework, projects, etc.

6. All faculty members shall attend their classes during the time designated by the college and as scheduled in the MS Teams, in order to avoid any scheduling conflict with the student's other online classes.

7. For monitoring purposes, Department Chairpersons or pertinent college officials shall be included in the MS Teams of each online class. The Department Chairperson or college official concerned shall submit monthly reports to the College Dean about the conduct of online classes in his/her department.

Team Teaching

Team Teaching is defined as having more than one faculty member responsible for some or all of the instructional aspects of a course in any given semester.6 Integrated team-taught model may be applied for online teaching where members of the team collaboratively and actively participate in all phases of the course, including development of course materials, evaluation of student work, and attendance in and preparation for all class sessions.

The use of team-teaching for online classes shall be subject to the approval of the Office of the Vice-President for Academic Affairs. In addition, the general guidelines for online teaching shall be governed by the following rules:

1. All faculty members handling general education courses, or specialty courses with multiple sections, are encouraged to apply team teaching in their online classes.
2. All of the faculty members' names in a team-taught class will be listed in the MS Teams platform so that students can see that their class is team-taught. However, the first faculty member listed in the MS Teams shall be the lead faculty.
3. The lead faculty shall collaborate with the other team members in the design of the course, identification of topics and assignments, development of course materials, and formulation of course policies, ensuring that each faculty member equally participates in the administration and conduct of the course subject.
4. The course to be team-taught should have a course syllabus that clearly explains the nature of the team teaching and identifies the role of each faculty member in the team-taught class, including the following information:
    a. The names, contact information, and consultation hours of all the team members.
    b. Criteria for assessment and evaluation.
    c. The name/s of the faculty member/s who are in charge of a particular lesson; and d. the name of the faculty member in charge of grading.
5. Faculty members in a team-taught class may opt to deliver the learning materials, whether synchronous or asynchronous, simultaneously to all the combined classes, or at different times to each class. Faculty members may also decide that for certain class sessions, each class shall be handled by a different faculty member.
6. Common assessments (e.g., exams, papers, projects) shall be determined by the lead faculty but may be evaluated by individual faculty members.

Guidelines on the Conduct of Synchronous Online Classes

1. The prescribed minimum number of hours for synchronous sessions is 50% of the total required hours or sessions for the entire semester.

2. For each synchronous online class, the recommended contact time is one (1) hour per session only, unless the faculty involved believes that more time is needed to maximize student engagement and learning outcomes. The remaining contact hour may be conducted thru asynchronous online activities. This, however, shall not exceed the allotted time of one and a half hours for a three-unit course.

3. Faculty members should always notify their students thru the MS Teams, at least one (1) week in advance, should they decide to conduct a synchronous online class.

4. At the beginning of the semester, faculty members shall explain to the students the required netiquette for online classes, as prescribed in this Omnibus Guidelines, including the proper use of microphones, webcams, and chat features; protocols for classroom engagement and student-to-student interaction during online activities; and ways to seek help using technology.

5. Prior to the start of each synchronous session, faculty members must ensure that all equipment, including computers/laptops, headphones, microphones, etc. are working. Each faculty member should also test his/her internet connectivity and ensure good audio and video quality before the class starts.

6. The use of webcam is a must for faculty members during synchronous online sessions. Students with weak internet connections may opt not to use their webcams.

   The use of webcam during discussions and other interactive activities can improve engagement and learner satisfaction. However, faculty members should also keep in mind the limits of the online environment for each student. For instance, if a student has a weak internet connection, the faculty and student can agree that the opening of webcams shall be limited to instances when the student is prompted to speak.

7. Faculty members shall always maintain professional appearance throughout the synchronous online session. Netiquette, as prescribed under Section V(E) of this Omnibus Guidelines, shall be observed at all times.

8. Faculty members should always prepare for contingency plans in the event that a technical problem arise, whether on the part of the students or the faculty members, during the synchronous online session.

9. Faculty members without gadgets and/or weak internet connections will be allowed to use the facilities on campus, subject to approval and strict compliance with the minimum health care protocols being implemented by the PLM COVID-19 Task Force. The VP for Academic Affairs shall review and coordinate with the VP for Administration all applications for use of the PLM facilities for this purpose.

Guidelines on the Conduct of Asynchronous Online Classes

1. The prescribed minimum number of hours for asynchronous sessions is 50% of the total required hours or sessions for the entire semester.
2. The use of asynchronous lecture materials is highly recommended, with due regard to the nature, objectives and learning outcomes of the course. For this purpose, faculty members may consider recording several, eight to ten (8 to 10)-minute micro-video lectures to maximize the attention span and retention of students. Moreover, it may be easier to upload online materials with smaller bytes.
3. In the conduct of asynchronous online classes, faculty members should provide the students with clear instructions and expected deliverables for every online learning material posted. Even in asynchronous online classes, faculty members should promote the active engagement of students.
4. Faculty members should consider pacing in the completion of online learning materials, in order to keep all students to a similar timeline. They should also consider adequate time for submission of required assignments or other school works assigned to the students.
5. Faculty members are expected to provide effective, timely and meaningful feedback to the asynchronous online activities of students, including recognition for good work and recommendations for improvement.

Netiquette (Internet Etiquette) Policies during Online Classes

1. Netiquette Policy for Faculty Members

All faculty members of PLM, whether full-time or part-time, shall strictly comply with the following netiquette (internet etiquette) policies during online classes:

a. All faculty members shall always maintain their professional appearance during synchronous classes by wearing proper attire. Proper attire for faculty members is at least collared shirt, both for synchronous and taped/asynchronous sessions.

b. Faculty members are expected to observe professional and ethical behavior in all his/her dealings online. They should uphold the highest standards of decorum and behavior and serve as role models to their students.

c. Faculty members should always be cognizant of, and sensitive to, their online communications and other online dealings with the students, other faculty members, and other participants in the online fora, taking into account the context of their online correspondences, their reputation and that of the University, and applicable standards of online behavior.

d. In the use of online resources, faculty members should respect other people's time and bandwidth, by only sending messages or posting materials that are substantive and which relate to the academic discussion or matter at hand. Faculty members should refrain from sending or posting memes, spam messages, online promotions and advertisements, and the like .

e. Faculty members should only post and share content from verifiable, expert sources.

f. Faculty members must be punctual during synchronous classes.

g. To avoid distraction to students during synchronous online classes, faculty members should ensure that there are no background noise or unnecessary activities while they are conducting the online class. If necessary, they should select a quiet place or venue where they can properly engage with their students during class discussions.

2. Netiquette Policy For Students

All PLM students, whether enrolled in the undergraduate or graduate degree programs, shall strictly comply with the following netiquette (internet etiquette) policies during online classes, whether synchronous or asynchronous:

a. Students should be punctual in attending their classes and should come prepared for class. They are expected to log in to their MS Teams or Zoom account at least five (5) minutes prior to the start of the class.

b. All students, except new students or new transferees, shall wear the prescribed complete PLM uniform. New students and new transferees will be allowed to wear the appropriate civilian attire for the first two (2) months of the academic year, unless extended by the Office of the Vice-President for Academic Affairs. Proper civilian attire for students is at least collared shirt. All students should also be properly groomed when attending online classes.

c. Students should check their internet connectivity, audio, video cameras, and microphone/headphone prior to the start of each class to ensure good audio and video quality. As much as possible, they should check their surroundings and remove distractions or barriers that might hinder optimal learning.

d. As a general rule, during synchronous online classes, students should keep their microphones on mute unless they are called and prompted to speak. However, this should not prevent students from actively participating in class discussions or deliberations, or from asking questions that are germane to the academic discussion.

e. Students should always speak and /or chat responsibly by using proper and acceptable language. They should show respect to the diversity of opinions inside the virtual classroom and to individual differences during class discussions.

f. Students should accord due respect to the professor's and their classmates' privacy at all times. Private information such as passwords, names, contact numbers, etc., should not be furnished to other people without the owner's consent or permission.

g. Recording of virtual classes by the students, whether thru direct or indirect means, is prohibited.

h. Sharing of videos, lectures, and notes of professors without proper permission shall not be allowed.

i. In the same way, taking screenshots of videos and images of classmates during an online class, and/or sharing the same without the owner's consent or permission is prohibited.

j. Students should leave their online classes in an appropriate manner by properly informing their professors beforehand that they intend to leave.

Any violation of the abovementioned rules shall be subject to appropriate disciplinary actions as provided in the PLM Student Manual, the University Code, and other applicable University rules and regulations.

F. Student Assessment and Evaluation

1. The current student grading system of PLM shall remain in place, and shall continue to be in force and effect, unless otherwise provided by this Omnibus Guidelines.

2. At the beginning of the semester, faculty members shall provide rubrics, or detailed grading criteria, for every assignment or learning activity, to promote transparency in grading and evaluation.

3. Faculty members should keep the assessment criteria relevant and appropriate to the learning objectives and outcomes of the course.

4. In the assessment and evaluation of students, faculty members must provide quick and frequent feedbacks on the progress reports, postings, papers, and other student works in order to facilitate learning and maintain student motivation.

5. In the conduct of online examinations, faculty members are encouraged to employ different strategies to foster academic honesty and academic excellence, such as:

   a. In multiple choice questions, faculty members may randomize the order of the correct answers.

   b. In online examinations, faculty members may require segment-by-segment completion of exams so that students will not be able to re-enter a test segment. They may also decide to allot a short window of time to complete the examination, as it reduces the student's ability to access the test, look up the answers online, and re-enter the test.

c. As much as possible, faculty members should resort to exams that challenges the analytical and critical thinking of students, such as position papers, essays and personal statements.

d. The use of online plagiarism detection tools is encouraged.

e. Faculty members may also add security measures to online exams, such as the use of passwords or lockdown browsers to prevent printing, copying, using of another URL, or accessing other applications.

6. Faculty members should consider balancing formative and summative assessments both for online and modular modalities.

7. Insights in Microsoft Teams can help faculty members catch up on all the Microsoft Teams activities of students, including assignment and engagements in class conversations.

Use of Printed Learning Materials for Students with No or Low/Limited Internet Connectivity, or No Access to Computer Gadgets

1. The lack of, or low, internet connectivity, or the lack of access to computer gadgets, shall not be a hindrance to receiving quality education in PLM, nor should it pose any burden or difficulty to the students.

2. The use of printed learning materials shall be the preferred mode of learning delivery to students with no internet connectivity.

3. For students with low or limited internet connectivity, they may also resort to the use of these learning materials, which may be sent to them via email, Facebook messenger, or other online means, whether in PDF or other acceptable format.

4. All colleges should regularly conduct a survey of all students to determine access to internet connectivity and computer gadgets for both students and faculty members, and recommend solutions as necessary. Based on this survey, each college should determine the volume and extent of printed materials to be produced and distributed to affected students.

5. The printed learning materials may be picked up by the student's representatives at selected pick-up points in PLM, or may be delivered to the students' residence themselves, thru the Manila Barangay Bureau. For the specific guidelines and procedure on the printing and distribution of printed learning materials, please refer to attached Annex A.

6. The printed learning materials shall contain the following minimum components:

   - Introduction/overview of the course, including the timeline of learning activities that the student is expected to finish.
   - Learning goals and objectives of each particular module
   - Lesson proper

- Exercises and other learning activities that the student is expected to accomplish, such as readings and other supplemental activities. Each learning activity should have a clear instruction for its accomplishment.
- Assignments
- Assessment/evaluation for the particular module

7. In the preparation of printed learning materials, faculty members must ensure that there are sufficient readings and activities in each module, equivalent to prescribed activities for online classes.

8. For students using printed learning materials, up to 90% of contact hours may be allowed for the student's self-study, accomplishment of written works and other activities prescribed in the printed modules. However, these students are required to attend, at a minimum, synchronous meetings with their faculty member on the first and last day of classes. During the last day of class, these students are required to deliver their final outputs for the course, which may include, but not limited to, oral examination, revalida or submission of final output/written paper.

9. Faculty members shall regularly communicate with students who availed of the printed learning materials instead of online classes. For this purpose, calls, text messaging, chat or similar modes of communications, may be used. The faculty member and student concerned shall retain records of their communication for monitoring purposes.

Use of Copyrighted Materials as Instructional Materials

1. In the preparation of learning materials, whether online or printed, copyrighted materials may be used by faculty members provided that he/she has written permission from the copyright owner, and references or citations are properly included. In certain circumstances however, the use of copyrighted materials without written permission may be allowed provided that the same is compatible with "fair use" as provided under Republic Act No. 8293 (the Intellectual Property Code).

2. Only the following instructional materials may be allowed to be posted in the LMS:
   a. Instructional materials the copyright of which is owned by the faculty member concerned.
   b. Instructional materials the copyright owner of which has granted written permission for its use in PLM.
   c. The instructional material is made available thru linking rather than direct uploading or copying.
   d. Instructional materials that belong in the public domain.
   e. Instructional materials the use of which is compatible with fair use under RA 8293.

Attendance Policy for Students during Flexible Learning

1. During this period when classroom teaching is not allowed, class attendance cannot be imposed as a requirement as part of the students' grade evaluation. Instead, individual outputs that demonstrate the students' learning outcomes must be used. Further, the faculty member shall:
   a. Not impose a higher standard for student participation in a remote learning environment compared to a seat-time requirement of being physically present.
   b. Shall communicate a clear and consistent message on what student engagement means for each learning activity.
   c. Provide early intervention to students who need academic, intellectual, emotional and logistical support to avoid academic disengagement and chronic absences.
2. Student attendance in an online session is defined as active participation in the class session at least once during the meeting. A student logging-in to an online class is not sufficient to establish academic attendance. Instead, the student must engage in the academic discussion, as evidenced by, but not limited to, any of the following:
   - Joining in and actively participating on, either by actively listening or thru recitations, a synchronous online class session where there is an opportunity for direct interaction between the faculty member and the students.
   - Submission of an academic assignment/homework/project on time.
   - Submission of an exam/quiz on time.
   - Posting by the student, within the prescribed period, in a discussion forum which shows the student's participation in the online academic discussion.
   - An email from the student or other documentation which shows the student-initiated contact with a faculty member, within the prescribed time period.
   - Student participation during scheduled academic related activities and services.
3. For students who use printed learning materials, student attendance may be considered in any of the following cases:
   - Submission of an academic assignment/homework/project on time.
   - Submission of an exam/quiz or equivalent outputs on time.
   - Checking-in with the faculty member at least twice a week via online chats or call/text messaging through cellular phone, or other means of communication, provided that the same is fully documented by the student and the faculty member concerned.

4. Minimum attendance required for students for synchronous sessions is at least 10% of the total synchronous sessions and for asynchronous sessions is also at least 10% of the total asynchronous sessions, for them not to be dropped in the subject.
